

Tools and Technology that Enhance Remote Viewing Skills

Editor's Pre-Copy - Rough Draft

Scott Rauvers

A complete archive of more than 76 remote viewing sessions over the previous 2 years remote viewing the stock market based on the information in this book is archived at:

www.ez3dbiz.com/remote_viewing.html

This edition not only includes methods and techniques to enhance intuition, but also includes gems and foods proven to enhance intuition. The technology and hardware discussed in this book is the result of the research done on Torsion Fields by Dr. Nikolai Kozyrev. Torsion fields have been shown to interact with the fields of consciousness and time, either making it more or less dense. We devote an entire chapter on Torsion Fields and its effects on time in this edition.

Tools and Technology that Enhance Remote Viewing Skills

Welcome to one of the most informative and up to date books on Remote Viewing Technology available anywhere. The purpose of this book is to give new or seasoned remote viewers the latest proven techniques that improve their skills of remote viewing, as well as lay the foundation for technology that enhances the clarity of remote viewing. Very little information exists on research done on Associative Remote Viewing. The purpose of this book is to connect the dots and put into context technology that allows for communication across space time using remote viewing as the primary medium. This book is part two of our first remote viewing book released in 2016 titled Wormhole Theories, Sunspot Activity and Remote Viewing Stocks. Since that time our remote viewing research has evolved to include a technological device to enhance the accuracy of Associative Remote Viewing, allowing us to clearly see up to 4 days in advance. The technology is based upon the neutrino principle which interfaces with coherent fields of energy that act as a frequency puller for future frequencies that exist in the quantum hologram.

This edition is meant for the remote viewer with some experience wanting to move up the tanks and take on greater challengers. This guide will take seasoned remote viewers to new levels, revealing their potential and harness new skills.

The 10 Rules of Great Science

Substances / Tools used to measure / induce an effect can also influence the object(s) being measured / studied

If the same information you are researching keeps popping up, it is true

Follow the data. After recording the data, assemble the theory. This creates reproducible results

Create a summary of your facts and conclusions

The more passive one is before nature, the more nature will reveal its secrets

Nature never uses a language we can understand, however, nature is talking to us all the time. Nature speaks to us all the time in the form of energy and information. The key is to listen and identify what it is saying to us.

To have the real facts revealed, turn yourself into an opponent of all you study. Be sure you thoroughly assess all the main and marginal parts, then oppose them from every possible angle, including all its hidden aspects. Sticking faithfully to this course of action will clearly yield all the facts.

Review your data, then mold the data into proper context by simplifying the data by connecting the relevant dots

Constant and Reproducible results - all final data must be 100% reproducible

If under persecution, remember this wise phrase - "Great minds discuss ideas, average minds discuss events and small minds discuss people."

How to Get the Most out of the Information shown in this Edition

The information and research shown in this book is not just for remote viewing stocks. It can be used to significantly improve your current remote viewing skills, especially remote viewing the future. Use the knowledge found in this book to enhance the success and accuracy of your remote viewing the currencies, the futures, commodities or other financial instruments. It will also greatly enhance your intuition in everyday life.

Scientific References, Documentation and Published Studies

While the technology of associative remote viewing is new and groundbreaking and many new exciting discoveries are being made today more often than at any other time, citing references for the observations in this book can be difficult. Where possible, complete scientific references and published papers that appear in peer reviewed journals are included in this edition. By comparing our observations and research to the peer reviewed research, it concretizes our discoveries, continuing to advance the science of remote viewing, making accurate remote viewing more and more of a reality.

INTRODUCTION

There are not many good books that display facts and research about remote viewing. This is partly due to the fact that in the early 21st century, while remote viewing is continuing to gain broad acceptance, it is still regarded by mainstream science as controversial, which is why not a lot of professionally researched information exists on this topic just yet. Another fact is performing the research and then putting the research into writing, especially into a format that can be easily understood by the average reader is a real undertaking in itself. Thankfully the years of expertise and knowledge of the Solar Institute has made this herculean effort a reality.

The 2017 Remote Viewing Trials

16 Remote Viewing Sessions were conducted in early 2017 by the Solar Institute using methods from the first edition of our book titled: Wormhole Theories, Sunspot Activity and Remote Viewing Stocks. These sessions yielded confirmation of the right atmospheric and solar conditions conducive to successful ARV sessions. The 2017 ARV sessions also gave us an opportunity to test and refine new hardware that works alongside an ARV session.

How Dowsing for Water is Similar to the Remote Viewing shown in in this book

ARV sessions are like dowsing for water. When a person dowses for water, they communicate with their subconscious mind. Dowsing for water involves holding a wire (or sometimes a pendulum) in one's hand, and while walking through a field the person repeats, “you will become firm and rigid when we are near water and point to the exact spot the water is”. When you want to know how deep down the water is, you ask the wire to tap number of times on your leg, with each tap representing the number of feet down the water is located. In the remote viewing methods shown in this book, we learn to create a similar clear link with our subconscious mind.

Throughout the 2017 Dow Jones Remote Viewing Project, we discovered a positive side effect, and that is that overall intuition in daily life is significantly enhanced. Not only can you use the techniques described in this book to enhance your intuition, but you have access to unlimited potential where fore-knowledge of certain events give you a significant advantage. One major discovery was that the best remote viewing results would always occur at night. Night is when our conscious mind establishes a clearer link with our subconscious. One obvious example of this link is the inspiration we receive through our dreams.

ARV. Short for Associative Remote Viewing

Throughout this book you will see the term ARV often used. ARV is short for the term Associative Remote Viewing. The common term for using our psychic ability to view objects, places and events in real time is called "Remote Viewing". The term commonly used for remote viewing future events is known as "Associative Remote Viewing". ARV is the next step after having learned the basics of remote viewing.

Quantum Holography

The major discovery made by the Solar Institute while researching associative remote viewing was the ability to experience the Quantum Hologram. The Quantum Hologram exists outside of our perception, yet at the quantum scale. The Quantum Hologram is constructed of neutrons and photons. These neutrons and photons lay the foundation for the future we experience. In this edition, we uncover how solar weather conditions allow one to experience the Quantum Hologram and to extract information from it.

Radiation and Time

In the science fiction movie Back to the Future, the radioactive isotope Plutonium is used as the main power source to power the flux capacitor, which allows real life physical time travel. Mild radiation via ionization is a key element in associative remote viewing, especially the beta emitters, one of which is Tritium. Another beta emitter is yttrium, which happens to power one of the world's most accurate atomic clock. These forms of radiation are safe to use when properly packaged.

Scott Rauvers

The Neutrino

The second major discovery made was that neutrino particles interact with the human nervous system. Neutrinos emerge from the very center of our sun, and can also come from distant parts of our galaxy. Neutrinos have a seasonal variation, closely resembling that of solar activity, which is certain solar weather conditions create more successful ARV sessions.

Hydrogen Isotopes

Tritium and Deuterium are both isotopes of hydrogen. Tritium emits a glow due to the low radiation. Tritium radiation is so harmless, it can be found on key-chains sold on eBay and will continuously emit light for up to 10 years. As long as the Tritium is not breathed in and is kept in a sealed enclosure, it is safe to handle. Our research at the Solar Institute showed that having an Isotope of Tritium in close proximity during ARV sessions greatly enhanced the success of ARV sessions. We believe this is due to the fact that when Tritium is placed into a coherent field, it acts as a faster than light receiver of information. This could also account for the fact that certain minerals known to improve psychic ability such as Apatite are slightly radioactive. For example, Apatite contains small amounts of uranium. Neutrinos emerge from Uranium in the soil beneath our feet. This is the basis from which the radioactive substance radon comes from as it rises up from the soil, especially in larger than average amounts before an earthquake.

Our research has shown that ARV session accuracy peaks during the wintertime. This time of year is when radon emissions from the soil also peak. Also neutrinos show a circadian cycle, peaking during the evening hours (First Indication of Terrestrial Matter Effects on Solar Neutrino Oscillation. A. Renshaw et al. 7th March 2014). As discussed earlier, our best ARV sessions always occurred during the evening, peaking at midnight due to atmospheric refraction. An entire chapter in this book is devoted to how refraction works and how it can be used to improve remote viewing. For example in the science fiction movie Frequency, radio waves from a Ham Radio become refracted due to stronger solar activity, giving the radio operator the ability to send ham radio signals back in time. It is also very interesting that in the movie Frequency, it consisted of two fireman who spoke to one another through space-time. Fire is one of the most common forms of radiation in nature and its flames exhibit refraction effects.

Heavy Water

Heavy water (Deuterium, an isotope of hydrogen) is used as a moderator of neutrons in nuclear power plants. Cherenkov Radiation contains particles that travel faster than the speed of light (In vivo Cerenkov luminescence imaging: a new tool for molecular imaging!. Gregory S. Mitchell. Nov 2011). This is due to the reaction that occurs when the radiation reacts with the heavy water used to cool nuclear reactors. Refraction is strongest when the light of the sun is on the horizon. At 8:45LST the star Arcturus has risen 1 hour above the eastern horizon. 8:45LST is a time where remote viewing accuracy peaks (Apparent Association Between Effect Size In Free Response Anomalous Cognition Experiments And Local Sidereal Times. James P. Spottiswoode).

Anti-Aging Effects

Any technology that allows one the ability to experience future events would also exhibit mild anti-aging effects. It just so happens there exist studies showing that the hydrogen isotope Deuterium extends lifespan when ingested in small amounts over time (Can heavy isotopes increase lifespan? Studies of relative abundance in various organisms reveal chemical perspectives on aging. Xiyang Li and Michael P. Snyder. August 2016). In this edition we include a section explaining that after certain ARV sessions, the body feels refreshed and rejuvenated, possibly due to the anti-aging effect taking place. Other studies show that low dose gamma radiation actually improves seed germination, mainly by affecting the roots (Effects of gamma rays irradiation on seed germination and growth of hard wheat. Mongi Melki and A. Marouani. December 2010). Other studies also show gamma radiation has beneficial effects on seedlings (Gamma Irradiation Effects On Seed Germination and Growth, Protein Content, Peroxidase And Protease Activity, Lipid Peroxidation in Desi And Kabuli Chickpea Amjad Hameed Et Al. 2008), (The Use Of Gamma Irradiation In Agriculture. Piri Issa Et Al. November 2011). Also there are some everyday foods that contain mild radiation such as Brazil Nuts. Brazil nuts concentrate barium, which is very similar in structure to radium.

(Retention of Radium Due to Ingestion of Brazil Nuts. J.J. Gabay and N.I. Sax. June 1969), (Chen J, Gao J; J AOAC Intl 76: 1193-205 (1993) (2) Eisenbud M, Gesell T, eds; Environmental radioactivity. 4th ed. San Diego, CA: Academic Press. pp. 134-200

Remote Viewing Technology

Towards the end of this second edition we give a general outline of technology that can be used to enhance ARV sessions based upon the neutrino principle, including how to properly generate a strong coherent field of energy that concentrates neutrinos, which then acts as a frequency puller for future frequencies existing in the quantum hologram.

Summary

Radiation may be linked to the nervous system which is connected to conscious awareness. When intention and focus is exercised at the right time, the conscious mind can break free of the time barrier, giving the user a significant advantage from the knowledge received.

Scientifically documented studies of the body's senses responding to future events

This edition also will clearly show that intuitive perception can be learned and that its effects have been scientifically validated. In the context shown in this book, intuitive perception means perceptions not based on reason or logic or even on memories from the past, but instead on accurate fore-knowledge with a time-frame up to 4 days into the future. This yields the most accurate results. When seeing out further than 4 days, the picture becomes "fuzzy". It also shows that the long-term future is flexible, and responds accordingly to our intentions and beliefs.

Recent experiments clearly show that intuitive perception of a future event is clearly related to the level of emotional significance taking place. The most recent studies are starting to reveal the relationship between the brain and the heart and how it is involved in processing a pre-stimulus emotional response from events taking place before they occur. This book will include full scientific references and studies confirming and validating these facts.

Tools and Technology that Enhance Remote Viewing Skills

In a later chapter of this edition, intuitive principles involving quantum holography that lay a theory of intuition involving the processes of energetic resonance welding the body's psychophysiological systems to the quantum level will be clearly displayed. The concept will clearly show how focused emotional attention directed at non-local objects attunes the bio-emotional energy that becomes generated by the body's psychophysiological systems, allowing complete access to the domain of quantum-holographic information. This quantum holographic domain contains implicit information about all events stretching across space-time. Hence, the body's ability to perceive information about things distant in space/time is experienced as intuition.

Chapter 1 - Scientific Documentation Of Future Precognition

As a scientist, I adhere to the rule that data builds the foundation upon which to make future discoveries. Let's first begin with the future-to-person information communication work performed by Honorton and Ferrari (1989) who conducted an analysis of 309 studies on precognition between the years 1935 and 1989. This extremely large scale study involved subjects that had to predict a pre-determined target that would be selected in the future. The study involved 62 different researchers and involved more than 50,000 subjects totaling nearly 2 million trials. The study concluded with the accuracy rate of correct predictions exceeding chance by 1025 to 1.

Emotions as Sensors for Future Stimuli

(Don et al.,1998; McDonough et al., 2002 and Warren et al., 1992a, 1992b) Don et al. performed a series of gambling studies. The studies concluded that "unconscious precognition" played a major role in the gambler's success.

The Nervous System and Future Emotions

Radin (1997a, 1997b, 2004) created experiments which evoked emotional responses using randomly selected calming photographs or emotionally arousing pictures and measured the participant's skin conductance level (SCL) and their photoplethysmographic measures of heart rate and blood. The study concluded with the following findings:

The comparison of the participant's SCL response between the emotional and calm trials exhibited a significantly greater change in their electrodermal activity approximately 5 seconds before a future emotional charged picture compared to a future calm picture. Similar studies using this same technique have come to the same conclusions (Bem, 2003; Bierman, 2000; Bierman and Radin, 1997; Bierman and Scholte, 2002; Radin, 2004).

MRI Brain Patterns during Pre-Stimulus PSI Trials

A more detailed study that involved the use of functional magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) discovered brain activity was more active in the regions near the brain's amygdala. The amygdala controls the processing of intense emotions such as rage and fear). This region of the brain "lit up" before emotional pictures were displayed, however no activity occurred before the calm pictures were displayed (Bierman and Scholte, 2002). This shows that our unconscious has a "built in" detection system for future stimuli.

Summary

Overall, the studies found that the body responded to an emotionally charged experience between four and seven seconds prior to experiencing the stimulus.

The greater the emotional significance of future stimulus, the larger the body's physiological response prior to experiencing the received stimulus. Research has proven that heart activity, especially the heart rhythm, directly reflects the processing of emotional experiences in the human body (McCraty and Childre, 2004; Tiller et al., 1996). We shall cover this in more detail in the next paragraph.

The Heart as a Vehicle for Detecting Future Stimuli

Research by The Institute of Heart Math concludes that the heart is directly involved in receiving and processing intuitive information about future events (McCraty et al., 2004a, 2004b). This would make sense because research studies have shown that the heart is directly affected by Geomagnetic Activity and when geomagnetic activity is quieter, ARV sessions are more accurate.

This is why a calm, coherent emotional state enhances the body's response to future information, greatly improving remote viewing accuracy because the heart is "in the zone".

In another research study on pre-stimulis trials titled: The Psychophysiology Of Intuition: A Quantum-Holographic Theory Of Nonlocal Communication which was conducted by Raymond Trevor, and published in 2007, the study concluded with the following results:

1 - Significant differences occurred in the brain's frontal areas and in the cortical event-related potentials during prestimuli activity. This was marked by a faster onset of the positive-going wave in the emotional trials and increased negativity.

2 - The study also found that the heart appeared to receive future information before the brain (on average 4.8 seconds before the stimulus).

3 - The brain's left temporal areas, frontal cortex, occipital areas, the parietal areas of the brain (showed slightly less activity) and were directly involved in the processing of intuitive information.

4 - Significant differences were detected in the heartbeats which evoked potentials between the calm and emotional trials primarily during the psychophysiological coherence state.

5 - Females were more attuned to information received from the heart.

The study concluded that intuitive perception does not function as a discrete function that is produced by a single part or system of the body alone, especially the brain as thought, but that intuition is a system-wide process that involves the heart and brain, and perhaps even other bodily systems, which all work together to coordinate the processing and decoding of intuitive information (McCraty et al., 2004a, 2004b, 2004–2005).

Research from Bowers et al. (1990) found that the unconscious mind can “close in” on a correct answer some time before the answer is accessible to consciousness. This shows that the unconscious may be moving ahead in time.

Collective Group Intuition

Analyses of RNGs (random number generators) Nelson (2002) and Radin (2002) discovered that the largest departure from random order in the year 2001 took place on 11 September 2001. Radin (2002) stated that virtually every examination he conducted of the 11 September event showed anomalous activity in the RNG output on the 11th September 2001.

Nelson and Radin also discovered global precognition occurring in the RNG output data before the attacks. The empirical pattern shows that random fluctuation occurred approximately three or four hours BEFORE the attacks.

Summary

Implicit global foreknowledge of impending negative future events that have a mass common significance (ie; collective intuition) becomes encoded in a "bio-emotional energy wave field" that exists in the general human population.

Receiving Intuition Information in Groups

Research is starting to show that groups focusing on a single purpose can achieve clearer results, compared to a single individual. Support for this concept comes from a remote viewing study conducted in a 3 day conference workshop in the country of North Italy (Targ and Katra, 2000). In this workshop, 24 participants who were previously unacquainted, attuned themselves to the researcher's emphasis on "creating a feeling of community and coherence of intention within the overall group". The workshop revealed that successful matches with the remote targets had an effect size of 0.64 (Targ and Katra, 2000: 107). This effect is substantially higher than that found in ESP experiments in classroom and group settings where a lack of attention, seriousness of purpose, motivation and poor training of the research subjects being tested are thought to account for the difference (Targ and Katra, 2000: 108).

Summary

Research suggests there exists a significantly enhanced clarity of non-local communication taking place in groups exhibiting "social coherence". Hence, a collective group may speed the processing of intuitive information in the following ways -

1 - Acting as a type of bio-magnetic, via the mechanism of frequency pulling, it draws energy of specific frequencies of the individual's bio-emotional wave field into harmony with the overall resonant frequency of the entire group. This standing wave allows each individual member of the group to generate and sustain a stable and psychophysiological coherent state, allowing clear access to non-local information.

2 - Through the principle of energetic resonance, the collective field becomes greatly amplified relative to the constituent components of each individual part (ie; the energy fields of the individuals). The end result is incoming information from non-local sources (ie; the future) becomes amplified by the existing coherent collective order, much the same way that radio waves from distant stars and galaxies become amplified by numerous radio telescopes placed close together.

General Summary

When there is overall coherence in the immediate environment, and Heart Math coherence is performed, it greatly enhances precognitive abilities. Coherence on a global scale occurs most often during the most favorable solar weather conditions, which are also called a "condition green". The condition green period occurs when solar wind speeds are favorable and earth's geomagnetic activity is quiet or in the "sweet spot" of between 7 and 11. You can read more about condition green periods, how to find them and what their significance is in my book Solar Flares and Their Effect Upon behavior and Human Health.

Free Will

Because ARV sessions are most accurate at these conditions, what does this say about free will? It may be that the major events have more weight during these times, which is why the Dow Jones is a measurement of economic activity. Economic activity is a representation of the driving forces of industrial society, hence its impact is more obviously felt. Free will really becomes collective will during these times. Hence at other times, individual free will takes over, allowing for independent innovation which eventually merges with the overall collective free will.

Chapter 2 - The Maharishi Effect And Its Effects on the Economy and the Stock Market

Another group effect occurs in what's known as "The Maharishi Effect". The following data is from Scientific Research on Maharishi's Transcendental Meditation and TM-Sidhi Programme: Collected Papers—Volumes 1–6 [over 5,000 pages; Volume 7 is in press].

Over 600 scientific studies, conducted at more than 250 independent research institutions in 33 countries document the benefits of Maharishi's Transcendental Meditation and TM-Sidhi Programme.

In a research study titled: Influence of the Maharishi Technology of the Unified Field on world events and global social indicators: The effects of the 'Taste of Utopia' Assembly, that took place from the 17th of December 1983 until the 6th of January 1984 consisted of 8,000 TM-Sidhas from 50 countries. They came together to meditate at the Maharishi University of Management campus in Iowa, resulted in profound positive experiences in the human population. During the time period 6,900, was the square root of 1% for the global population of 5 billion people. Research has confirmed that this figure is the minimum number of people concentrating together to maintain coherence positively affect the world consciousness and create positive change.

The duration of the peace project was three weeks and global coherence target time was nine days during the period. To monitor the group's effects, researchers analyzed a total of nine 'quality of life' social indicators from various countries around the world. At the end of the project, the data indicated significant rises in optimism, economic confidence and prosperity. Below are just a few of the findings from this research project, as well as other projects conducted using the Influence of the Maharishi Technology of the Unified Field.

1 - The World Stock Index (measurement of major stocks in 19 countries) reversed its downward trend and rose 4.5%(p =.0001). The study found that during the three week Iowa project, 19 out of 20 stock markets in various countries rose more than 1%.

2 - War deaths in Lebanon were reduced by 76% during days high attendance at the assembly occurred.

Chapter 3 – Scientific Studies Confirming Intuition Can Be Used To Make Money In The Markets, At The Casino Or To Succeed In Business

Quiet Geomagnetic Activity Increases Casino Payouts

D. Radin and J. Rebman (Seeking psi in the casino 1996) analyzed four years' worth of payouts in a Las Vegas Casino. The study looked at the ratios between the amounts won versus the amounts spent. The study found that the better the players' intuition, the greater the amount of the payout. The study also found that payout value fluctuated significantly and showed correlations with geomagnetic activity and the lunar cycle. It also showed that tidal forces played a significant role.

Winning Lottery Tickets and Geomagnetic Activity

M. Zilberman (1995/July) examined the ratio of winning lottery tickets to the total number of tickets sold in European numerical lotteries during the years between 1980 and 1989. The study found that the ratio changed between the months and that the changes showed significant correlations with earth's geomagnetic activity (KP Index, AP Index). The study concluded that when earth's geomagnetic activity was quieter, there were more winning lottery tickets sold. The ratio correlated with geomagnetic activity on the day of the lottery draw, but not earlier or later. The absolute probability of the result occurring randomly was <0.005 .

Business Opportunity and Intuition

Dean, Mihalsky, Schroeder & Ostrander (1974) published a research study where company presidents were tested for their powers of intuition. They found that precognitive ability was a very reliable indicator of a company's financial success. 80% of very successful company presidents (presidents who doubled their company profits in 5 years) scored above average on computerized precognition tests. The company presidents stated they used their intuition to foresee money-making opportunities (cited by Vaughan and Houck, 2000).

Using Feedback to Generate Intuition

1995 M. Zilberman (1995/Jan) published a research study stating it is possible to train intuition using immediate feedback. The study utilized visual and audio feedback after each trial in a computer-generated random series of even and odd events. The results of 5,100 trials showed a significant growth curve of correct guesses during the second half of the 100-trial sessions, compared to the first half of the trials. Overall, the percentage of correct guesses was 51.88% (The probability of these results occurring randomly was less than 1/250). After participants were subjected to the "training effect", the total percentage of their correct guesses during the second trials was 53.2% (The probability of these results occurring randomly was 1/1000).

Intuition as a Warning sign for Danger

W.E. Cox (1956) analyzed the number of tickets sold for 28 passenger trains that had crashed between the years 1950 and 1955. His research found that trains that crashed had fewer people compared to similar trains on the same day of the previous week. His research included weather conditions, and the number of tickets sold during the previous week, month and day. Due to the possibility of statistical results being explained as random fluctuations, W.E. Cox calculated the probability of accumulating the same data randomly. This probability was less than 1/100. Simply put, there is a 99/100 certainty that people really have and do use their intuition to avoid dangerous situations.

I have also found the opposite to be true. I live in Hawaii and live close to Hanauma Bay, which is home to thousands of traveling snorkelers. I would always notice that when the weather was more calmer and more comfortable and solar weather was at favorable levels, that Hanauma Bay would fill up with tourists much earlier than usual. This shows that collective intuition takes place in regards to seeking out relaxing and harmonious environments.

Using Immediate Feedback to Increase Intuition

Also called intuition training, the first published study was written by Charles Tart (1966). Charles proposed that immediate feedback following the results of a guess may improve intuition leading to the ability to make correct guesses (train intuition). In a series of studies published from 1960 to 1980, he invented some of the very first strategies for intuition training. His studies revealed the following regarding a person's ability to successfully train their intuition (Tart, 1977):

- (1) high (but not overly high) motivation,
- (2) high general learning ability,
- (3) an absence of specific conscious or inferred unconscious resistances to psi,
- (4) a good ability to discriminate the contents of the experimental field,
- (f) healthy memory skills,
- (g) the ability to quiet the mind,
- (h) an ability to experience non-attachment and to drop strategies that are not adaptive due to emotional investment in them,

Overall Findings

Human intuition can be trained and accurately measured in computerized and non-computerized experiments.

Intuition is trainable using audio-visual feedback (Zilberman, 1995/Jan) and exhibits long-term benefits (Vaughan and Houck, 2000).

Computerized intuition tests make good indicators of a person's everyday real-life intuition quality (Dean, Mihalsky, Schroeder and Ostrander, 1974).

Although I have not yet tested it myself, one form of software designed to test intuition is called The Intuition Tester. It is a very similar form of software used in the Zilberman research (1995/Jan). The software can be found at:

Other computerized intuition trainers can be found online by doing a search. Just be sure to find one that has received good reviews and ratings if you decide to use one.

Remote Viewing the Future of the Dow Jones

In a research study titled: Stock Market Prediction Using Associative Remote Viewing by Inexperienced Remote Viewers, that was published in July 2013 and conducted by Christopher Carson Smith and colleagues, the study found the following.

10 inexperienced remote viewers remote viewed the future outcome of the Dow Jones Industrial Average. The study looked at where the Dow Jones would close 48 hours in advance. The study concluded with the participants successfully predicting the outcome of the Dow Jones in seven out of seven attempts (binomial probability test, $p < .01$). During the test, investments in stock options were made which were based on the predictions, resulting in a significant financial gain.

In another study titled: Greg Kolodziejzyk's 13-Year associative Remote Viewing experiment Results, published by Greg Kolodziejzyk, the experiment involved 181 questions representing futures trades where real capital was risked. Out of the total sessions, 60% of the trades were profitable, resulting in approximately $146,587.30 profit. Greg based his research on work done in 1982 by Mr. Keith Harary and Russell Targ who attempted forecast changes every Monday in the closing price of the silver futures market. They looked out 5 days in advance, for a total of 9 weeks (9 Mondays). The technique used was the associate remote viewing developed by Mr. Stephan Schwartz (2007). The reason Monday was likely chosen is because Monday is a time of peak emotion. Remote viewing research is showing that the stronger the emotion the easier it is to detect it in the future. Our ARV sessions were always more accurate when done on Sunday nights leading into Monday mornings. Later on in this edition, we devote an entire chapter to this.

Important Information for the Independent Associative Remote Viewer

When remote viewers view a target, and this includes targets of the future, they usually work in a group. The participants do not know what they are remote viewing and are usually given a number or some other objective form to focus on. Why is this? Why can't they just view the target or know what they are working on? The reason for this is due to the fact that the subconscious mind causes interference during the ARV session. This can be overcome with the right solar weather conditions. This is when the conscious mind has more strength than the subconscious mind and is not as susceptible to this "interference". Hence associative remote viewing sessions can be conducted with extreme clarity without the need of a group.

Thank you for your interest in one of the most comprehensive and in-depth books on Associative Remote Viewing ever written.

The final draft of this text will be available in book form in early August 2017.
